

Professional Bio

Vikas Verma is an Economist at the Centre for WTO Studies, with a background in economics and a focus on international trade and emerging areas of economic policy. He holds an MSc in Economics from the Gokhale Institute of Politics and Economics and a Bachelor's (Hons) degree in Economics from the Vivekananda Institute of Professional Studies. His work spans Digital Trade, Artificial Intelligence, bilateral and regional trade agreements, WTO issues, and India's evolving trade and regulatory environment, with a particular interest in how technology is reshaping global commerce and economic policy. He has authored publications on international trade, including a book chapter examining the impact of Artificial Intelligence on international trade.